

Unit 6

Tiān bú pà, dì bú pà, zhǐ pà [wàiguó rén, etc.] shuō Zhōngguó huà!

Nothing to fear from heaven, nothing to fear from earth – the only thing to fear is [‘foreigners’, etc.] speaking Chinese!

(Self-depreciatory phrase, taught to the author by one of his Chinese teachers.)

Contents

6.1	Opposites
6.2	Describing people	Exercise 1
6.3	Verb- guo	Exercise 2
6.4	When, before, after
6.5	When?	Exercise 3, 4
6.6	Places of work	Exercise 5
6.7	Directions	Exercise 6
6.8	The shi-de construction	Exercises 7, 8
6.9	Dialogue: Where are you from?	Exercise 9
6.10	Calling Michael Jordan	Exercise 10
6.11	Food (3)
6.12	Highlights	Exercise 11
6.13	Rhymes and rhythms
	Appendix 1: Chinese historical periods

6.1 Opposites

With SVs, opposites can be formed by negation: duì > bú duì. However, in many cases, there exists a word that can stand in for the negative phrase as a true opposite: duì ‘right’ > cuò ‘wrong’. Occasionally, if they share a domain but are regarded as contrary, pairs of nouns can also be treated as opposites: xuésheng and lǎoshī; nánzǐ and nǚzǐ; gǒu ‘dog’ and māo ‘cat’. Exploration of opposites can reveal subtle cultural and linguistic differences. Chinese, for example, consider the opposite of xīn ‘new’ to be either lǎo ‘old’ [in the sense of former or antiquated] or jiù ‘old’ [in the sense of used or dilapidated]. But lǎo, in the context of foods such as tofu, can also mean ‘tough’, opposite to nèn ‘soft’ [like baby’s skin]:

Ròu tài lǎo le. The meat’s tough!
Zhè dòufu hěn nèn. This tofu’s quite soft.

Shēng (chūshēng de shēng, xuéshēng de shēng) can mean ‘raw; unripe’ (as well as ‘to bear; be born’) and as such, is opposed to shóu ‘ripe; cooked’. Shóu has a range of meanings, from ‘ripe’ to ‘familiar’ and ‘experienced’; it also has two pronunciations, shóu and shú, the latter more common with the meaning ‘familiar; experienced’ rather than ‘ripe’.

Rìběn rén hěn xǐhuan chī shēngyú. The Japanese like to eat raw fish [‘sashimi’].

Yīngguó rén bǐjiào xǐhuan chī The English prefer well-cooked meat.
shóuròu!

In Chinese, the term for ‘opposite’ is xiāngfǎn ‘mutual opposition’. Thus:

Rè de xiāngfǎn shì shénme? What’s the opposite of ‘hot’?
<Rè de xiāngfǎn> shì lěng. Cold.

Dà ne, dà de xiāngfǎn shì shénme? And ‘big’, what’s the opposite of ‘big’?
Ng, dà de xiāngfǎn yěxǔ shì xiǎo. Uh, the opposite of ‘big’, I suppose, is ‘small’.
Gāo ne? And ‘tall’?
Nà, gāo de xiāngfǎn shì ǎi; Well, the opposite of ‘gao’ is ‘short’;
gāo de xiāngfǎn yě shì dī. the opposite of ‘gao’ is also ‘low’.

Below is a list of opposites with rough English glosses. A feel for their range and usage will have to wait until they have been encountered in different settings; but for now, you can practice pronunciation and start to get familiar with the words (SVs, as well as some nouns or noun-phrases) by asking for, or responding with, their opposites, as follows:

Q: [] de xiāngfǎn shì shénme? A: [] de xiāngfǎn shì [].

List

duō shǎo	shàng xià	zài chéng lǐ	zài xiāngxià
many few	above below	in town	in the country
gāo ǎi	gāo dī	cháng duǎn	guì piányi
tall short	high low	long short	expensive cheap
hǎo huài	kuài màn	pàng shòu	zuǒ yòu
good bad	fast slow	fat thin	left right
xiāng chòu	gānjìng zāng	cōngmíng bèn	nán róngyì
fragrant smelly	clean dirty	clever; stupid	difficult easy

6.2 Describing people

Describing people involves a number of constructions. Most simply, a SV may suffice:

Tā hěn cōngmíng.	She's very clever.
Tā hěn kě'ài.	She's quite cute.
Tā yǒu diǎnr juè.	He's a bit gruff.
Tā yǒu diǎnr tiáopí.	She's kind of mischievous.
Tāmen dōu hěn guāi.	They're very well behaved [of children].
Tā bǐjiào pàng.	He's kind of heavy. ('fat')
Tā hěn shuài.	He's good looking. ('smooth; in command')
Tā hěn piàoliang.	She's pretty.
Tā yǒu diǎnr hàixiū.	She's kind of shy.
Tā hěn kù.	<S>he's cool.

Notes

- juè a colloquial word meaning ‘blunt’ or ‘gruff’.
- tiáopí, guāi words typically applied to children: ‘naughty’ and ‘good’.
- shuài the sense seems to be ‘controlled; unruffled; cool’ and thence ‘good looking’; shuài is usually applied to men. Piàoliang ‘pretty; beautiful’, but whose literal meaning seems to be ‘rinsed with light’, is usually applied to women (also to clothes and beautiful things).

In cases in which one aspect, or part of a person is being described, then the pattern is ‘topic-comment’, which often corresponds to a sentence with ‘have’ in English: eg: Tā yǎnjing hěn dà. ‘She has big eyes. (she eyes quite big)’

TOPIC	COMMENT
person	part	<adv> SV
Tā	rén	hěn hǎo.
Tā	yǎnjing	hěn dà.
Tā	gèzi~gèr	hěn gāo.

- Tā rén hěn hǎo. He’s very nice.
- Tā shēntǐ bú cuò. She’s in good shape.
- Tā yǎnjing hěn yǒushén. She has ‘sparkling’ eyes. (‘have-spirit’)
- Tā gèzi hěn gāo. He’s quite tall.
- Tā liǎn hěn kuān. She has a broad face.
- Tā pífu hěn bái / hēi. He has light skin / dark skin. (‘black/white’)
- Tā bízi hěn gāo. He has a big nose. (‘high’)

In spite of the earlier example of ‘skin’, which can be characterized as bái or hēi, colors tend to be incorporated in a ‘categorical’ construction with shì ... de (‘he hair be black-color ones’), as follows:

- Tā tóufa shì hēisè de. He has black hair.
- Tā tóufa shì huángsè de. She has brown hair. (‘yellow’)

Notes

Tā rén hěn hǎo. Rén here has the sense of ‘as a person’, ie ‘he’s very nice’. Shēntǐ, on the other hand, is the physical body.

yǎnjīng ‘eye’, with qīngshēng on the second syllable; contrast with yǎnjìng ‘glasses’, literally ‘eye-mirrors’, with final falling tone.

gèzi ‘height; stature’; also gèr.

bízi large or prominent noses are described as gāo, as well as dà liǎn faces are often described as kuān ‘broad’ [typical of north China] or cháng ‘long’ or shòu ‘thin’ [more typical of south China].

pífū ‘skin’; people in China are often described in terms of skin tone.

tóufa The Chinese usually describe the shades of brown to blonde hair that are characteristic of northern Europeans not as brown (zōngsè) but as huángsè de ‘yellow’. If finer distinctions are made, then ‘blond’ is jīnsè de (‘gold’) or jīnhuángsè de (‘golden yellow’), and zōngsè de can be used for darker browns.

6.2.1 SVs as attributes

There is a line in the popular song, Lóng de chuánrén, ‘Descendants of the Dragon’ that reads:

hēi yǎnjīng hēi tóufa huáng pífū, yǒngyǒng yuǎnyuǎn shì lóng de chuánrén black eyes black hair yellow skin, eternally be dragon’s descendants

The line shows that in addition to the ‘person (part-SV)’ pattern illustrated above (tā yǎnjīng hěn dà), there is the option of placing color words and other SVs before the noun that they modify: dà bízi; gāo gèzi, etc. When characterizing a subject, such expressions are idiosyncratic. For example, although it is possible to say tā bízi hěn gāo, the alternative expression is usually tā <shi> gāo bíliáng<r> ‘he’s high nose-bridged’, ie ‘he’s got a large nose’ rather than just tā <shi> gāo bízi – though tā <shi> dà bízi ‘he[’s] big-nose[d]’ is also said.

Tā gèzi ~ gèr hěn gāo. > Tā <shi> gāo gèzi ~ gèr.

Tā bízǐ hěn gāo.

Tā <shi> gāo bǐliáng<r> ~ dà bízǐ.

Tā tóufa shì hēisè de.

Tā <shi> hēi tóufa.

There is a nuance of difference between the two patterns. The first simply describes the person as tall, etc.; the second is more absolute, placing him in a category of tall people: Tā <shi> gāo gèzi ‘He’s of tall stature’. At this point, it is enough to be aware that both options exist.

6.2.2 Zhǎng + DE

Instead of just describing someone as gāo ‘tall’ or piàoliang ‘pretty’, Chinese often use the expression zhǎng+de ‘grow up [to be...] – with no final-le.

Tā zhǎng+de zhēn shuài.

He’s [grown up] very handsome.

Tā zhǎng+de hěn gāo.

She’s [grown up] very tall.

Tā zhǎng+de hěn shòu.

She’s [grown up] very thin.

Tā zhǎng+de hěn zhuàng!

He’s [grown up] very strong.

Summary of descriptions

person	part	link	attribute
Tā			hěn gāo. yǒu diǎnr juè.
Tā		[shi]	gāo gèzi. hēi tóufa.
Tā	rén gèzi		hěn hǎo. hěn gāo.
Tā	tóufa	<shi>	huángsè de.
Tā		zhǎng+de	hěn gāo. zhēn shuài.

Exercise 1.

Describe the following people, as indicated:

1. A sibling: tall; good looking; decent person.
2. A classmate: short; sparkling eyes; thin.

3. An American friend: brown hair; healthy; cute.
 4. Your teacher: tall; a bit overweight; gruff.
 5. A friend: tall, dark, big eyes.
 6. The kid next door: skinny; big eyes, mischievous.
-

6.3 Verb - guò ‘have you ever...’

When people hear you speaking Chinese, they are bound to ask you if you have ever been to China; if you have, they might also ask you if, when you were there, you had visited the Stone Forest (Shí Lín) in the southwest, or seen the terracotta figures (bīngmǎyǒng ‘soldiers-horses-figures’) at Xi’an, if you had eaten special Chinese foods like sea cucumber (hǎishēn) or shark’s fin (yúchì), or done any of a host of other things. As you know from the brief remarks in §3.3.4, such questions, as well as their typical responses make use of a verb suffix, guò (untuned in northern speech), placed directly after the verb: qù-guo; chī-guo; kàn-guo. Guò’s root meaning is ‘pass; cross over’, but as a verb suffix, it signals that an event has [ever] occurred in the past, or has occurred over a period in the past, but says nothing about precisely when it occurred in that period. For this reason, guò is sometimes referred to as an ‘experiential’ suffix; its general meaning is ‘have ever had the experience of’; ‘did ever have the experience of’.

6.3.1 Guo patterns

Responses to questions with guo retain the guo in negative responses as well as positive. The negative response is, like that with le, formed with méiyou.

Shàng ge xīngqī, nǐ shàng-guo bān ma?

Did you go to work [at all] last week?

Méi shàng-guo, bù shūfu.

No, I didn’t, I was indisposed.

It should be noted that speakers from southern regions including Taiwan tend to align the positive and negative responses, responding to the first with yǒu (with or without V-guo) and the second with méiyǒu (with or without V-guo):

	Nǐ qù-guo Táiwān ma?	Have you [ever] been to China?
+	Yǒu. / Qù-guo.	[I] have.
-	Méiyǒu. / Méi qù-guo >.	[I] haven't.

The V-not-V question juxtaposes the positive with a final méi<you>, that can be regarded as a truncated version of the full negative, méi<you> qù-guo Zhōngguó.

Nǐ qù-guo Zhōngguó méiyǒu?	Have you been to China [or not]?
Hái méi qù-guo, kěshì hěn xiǎng qù.	Not yet, but I'd like to.

Shàng ge xīngqī, nǐ kàn-guo diànyǐng méiyǒu?	Did you see any films last week?
Méi kàn-guo; shàng ge xīngqī yǒu hěn duō kǎoshì, bù néng qù kàn diànyǐng.	No; last week, [I] had a lot of exams, I couldn't go to [any] films.

6.3.2 'Ever/never' and 'once; ever'

Two adverbs are particularly drawn to the construction with guò:

cónglái	only in negative sentences; meaning 'never'; sometimes reduced to just cóng;
céngjīng	not usually with negative sentences; meaning 'formerly; at some time; once; ever'; often reduced to céng in writing.

Wǒ cónglái méi chī-guo hǎishēn. I've never [ever] eaten 'sea cucumber'.

Nǐ shì bu shì céngjīng xué-guo Have you previously studied Chinese?
 Hànyǔ? / Bù, wǒ méi xué-guo. / No, I haven't.

The indefinite use of shénme, meaning ‘any’, is also common with comments about experience:

Shàng ge xīngqī nǐ kàn-guo Did you go to any Chinese movies last week?
 shénme Zhōngguó diànyǐng ma?
Kàn-guo Wòhǔ Cánglóng. [I] saw ‘Crouching Tiger Hidden Dragon’.

Summary

	Question	Response
‘have ever eaten x’	Chī-guo hǎishēn ma?	Chī-guo.	+
	Chī-guo hǎishēn Méi<you> chī-guo.	Méi<you> chī-guo.	-
	Chī-guo hǎishēn méi<you>?	[Méiyóu.]	-
‘have eaten; did eat’	Chīguo fàn le ma?	Chī<guo> le.	+
	Chīguo fàn le	Hái méi<you>	-
	méi<you>?	<chīguo<fàn>>> ne.

6.3.3 Xiē ‘several’

If you discover that someone has been to China, then you might want to know which places s/he’s been to. Něi ge dìfang would mean ‘which place’; but to ask ‘which places’, the M-phrase needs to be replaced by xiē ‘several’, as in the following example:

Nǐ qù-guo Zhōngguó ma? Have you been to China?
Qù-guo, wǒ shì qùnián qù de. I have, I went last year.
 O, nà nǐ qù-guo nǐ xiē dìfang? Oh, so which places did you go to?
Qù-guo Běijīng, Xī’ān, Shànghǎi; I went to Beijing, Xi’an, Shanghai; hái yǒu Guǎngzhōu, Chóngqìng. and also Canton and Chungking.
 Hěn duō ya! A lot!

Other examples

Nèi xiē shū dōu shì nǐ de ma?	Are these books all yours?
Zhè xiē dōngxi dōu hěn guì.	These things are all expensive.

6.3.4 Times

Frequently, you will want to respond to a guo-question with a number of ‘times’ or ‘occasions’: yí cì ‘once’, liǎng cì ‘twice’, dì-yī cì ‘the 1st time’. Huí (possibly more stylistically informal than cì) is used in much the same way: liǎng huí, sān huí. Cì and huí are M-words, but because they measure verbal events (and are not associated with a following noun), they are called ‘verbal measures’. Another common verbal measure is biàn ‘once through’ (as when repeating something). Here are some examples:

Wǒ qù-guo yí cì.	I’ve been [there] once.
Wǒ jiàn-guo tā jǐ cì.	I’ve met her a few times.
Wǒ chī-guo hǎo jǐ cì.	I’ve eaten it a ‘good many times’.
Wǒ lái-guo yí huí.	I’ve been here once before.
Qǐng nǐ zài shuō yí biàn.	Would you mind repeating [that].
Nǐ lái-guo Běijīng ma?	Have you been to Beijing before?
Wǒ zhè shì dì-yī cì!	This is my first time. (‘For me, this is 1 st time.’)
Dì-yī cì bú cuò, dànshì dì-èr cì gèng hǎowánr.	The 1st time wasn’t bad, but the 2nd time was even more fun.

Notes

a) While kàn has a basic meaning of ‘look’ (cf. kànshū, kànbìng), jiàn (zàijiàn de jiàn) suggests an encounter. The two may be combined as kànjiàn ‘see’: Kànjiàn le méiyóu? ‘Did [you] see [it]? Otherwise jiàn suggests meeting, visiting, catching sight of.

- b) Hǎo jǐ cì, with hǎo used here as an emphatic adverb.
 c) Zài (zàijiàn de zài – 再) ‘again’ is, of course, homophonous but otherwise distinct from zài zhèr de zài (在).

6.3.5 Dialogues

foods	hǎishēn	pídàn ~ sōnghuā	yúchì
	sea cucumber	preserved eggs	shark-fin [soup]

Other interesting foods include: yànwō ‘bird’s nest [soup] (swallow nest)’; jiǎoyú ‘soft-shelled turtle (shell-fish)’; yāzhēn ‘duck’s gizzard’ – more of a snack; hóunǎo ‘monkey brain’; and xióngzhǎng ‘bear paw’. The last two are often talked about but rarely ever eaten.

Kūnmíng. Shop specializing in yànwō, bàoyú, yúchì, hǎishēn. [JKW 2002]

films	Wòhǔ Cánglóng	Dàhóng Dēnglóng Gāogāo Guà.
		big-red lantern high hang
	Crouching tiger, hidden dragon	Raise the Red Lantern
places	Kūmíng	Dàlǐ
in Yunnan		Lǐjiāng Shílín
		The Stone Forest

- i) Nǐ chī-guo hǎishēn ma? Have you ever had sea cucumber?
 Méi chī-guo, cóng méi chī-guo; ? No, I never have? You?
 nǐ ne
 Wǒ chī-guo hǎo jǐ cì. I've had it quite a few times.
 Wèidào zěnmeyàng? How does it taste?
 Méi shénme wèidào, húaliūliū de. There's no particular taste, it's 'slick'.
 Lái yí ge chángcháng ba. Why don't we try one.
 Hǎo, fúwùyuán, qǐng lái ge Okay, waiter/waitress, bring us a cōngpá-hǎishēn. 'onion-braised sea cucumber'

a) Wèidào N 'taste; flavor';

b) Huá SV 'slippery'; huáliūliū 'slick; slippery'.

c) Cháng 'taste'; chángchang 'have a taste'. The word is homophonous with, but otherwise unrelated to cháng ~ chángchang 'often'.

d) Ways of hailing waiters or waitresses vary with time and place (as well as the age and status of both parties). On the Mainland, people often call out with the very familiar xiǎohuǒzi 'young fellow' or xiǎojié to youngish waiters and waitresses, respectively. The safer path for a foreigner on the Mainland, is to use the term fúwùyuán 'service person', as in the dialogue. Older customers may simply call out lǎojià 'excuse me; may I trouble you'.

e) Lái, in the context of ordering food, means 'cause to come', ie 'bring'.

ii) Sūzhōu

- Jiǎ Qǐngwèn, nǐ shì nǐ guó rén? May I ask which country you're from?
 Yǐ Wǒ shì Zhōngguó rén. I'm Chinese.
 Jiǎ Nǐ shì Zhōngguó shénme Whereabouts in China are you from?
 difang rén?
 Yǐ Sūzhōu rén. From Suzhou.
 Jiǎ O, Sūzhōu; wǒ méi qù-guo kěshi Oh, Suzhou; I haven't been there, but tīngshuō-guo nèi ge difang. I've heard of the place.

Yi	Shì ma?	[That] so?
Jiǎ	Dāngrán a, Sūzhōu hěn yǒumíng, tīngshuō yǒu hěn duō yùnhé, qiáo, chuántǒng de fángzi....	Of course, Suzhou's famous, [I] hear [it] has lots of canals, bridges, traditional houses....
Yī	Shì a, 'Sūzhōu yuánlín' hěn piàoliang. Wǒmen cháng shuō: 'Shàng yǒu tiāntáng, xià yǒu Sū Háng.'	Yes, Sūzhōu gardens are quite beautiful. We often say: 'There's paradise above, and Su(zhou) and Hang(zhou) below.'

Notes

Sūzhōu:	An ancient city, west of Shanghai, close to Lake Tai (Tài Hú), known for its canals, stone bridges, and fine mansions. Until the growth of Shanghai in modern times, Suzhou was the most important cultural and administrative center of the region. Its earlier wealth is reflected in the great houses and gardens that belonged to merchants and officials. One of the best known has the quaint name of 'The Humble Administrator's Garden' (Zhuō Zhèng Yuán). Much of the old city has been obliterated in recent years by industrial growth and extensive building. Hángzhōu is another historically important city, southwest of Shanghai.
tīngshuō-guo	'[I]'ve heard [it] said'; cf. tīngshuō '[I] hear [that]'.
yùnhé	'canal (transport-river)'; the Dà Yùnhé is the ancient Grand Canal, whose southern terminus is at Hángzhōu . From Hangzhou, it runs north to the Yangtze a little to the east of Zhènjiāng , then continues northeast towards Běijīng .
qiáo	'bridge'; yí zuò qiáo, yí ge qiáo .
huāyuán	'gardens (flower-garden)'; cf. gōngyuán 'public gardens'.
fángzi	'houses'; yì suǒ fángzi or yí dòng fángzi .
yuánlín	'(garden-groves)', a more formal term for gardens. Tourist brochures for Suzhou use the phrase Sūzhōu Yuánlín 'Suzhou gardens'.

Dàyùnhé, Sūzhōu. [JKW 1982]

Exercise 2.

Write out the corresponding Chinese in the space on the left.

Have you been to Beijing?

No, not yet, but my sister has; I'd like to go.

Have you ever eaten preserved eggs?

Never, but I'd love to try some.

Have you had breakfast yet?

Not yet.

Okay, let's go and have breakfast – we can order preserved eggs.

You eat preserved eggs for breakfast?

Of course, preserved eggs, rice gruel, pickles [pàocài], and noodles.

6.4 When, before, after

English and Chinese differ in the position of what are known as ‘subordinating conjunctions’, such as ‘when’, ‘before’ and ‘after’ in expressions like ‘when you’re in class’ or ‘after eating’ or ‘before going to bed’. In English such words appear at the head of their clauses; in Chinese they appear at the foot.

shàngkè de shíhou	when [you]’re in class
chīfàn yǐhòu	after [you]’ve eaten a meal
shuǐjiào yǐqián	before [you] go to bed

The expressions involved have a number of forms:

	colloquial	formal	written
when	<zài/dāng>...de shí<hou>		shí
before	yǐqián	zhīqián	qián
after	yǐhòu	zhīhòu	hòu

6.4.1 When

De shí<hou> means literally, ‘the time of [having class]’, ‘the time of [having your bath]’ etc.

shàng kè de shíhou	while in class
xǐzǎo de shíhou	when bathing chīfàn de shí	while eating
zài Zhōngguó de shí	when in China
xiǎo de shíhou	when [I was] young

Kāichē de shíhou bù yīnggāi hē píjiǔ.
You shouldn’t drink beer when you drive.

Kāichē de shíhou wǒ bǐjiào xǐhuan tīng màn yīnyuè.
When I drive, I prefer to listen to slow music.

Tā xǐzǎo de shíhou xǐhuan chànggē. She likes to sing in the bath.

Měnggǔrén chīfàn de shíhou Mongolians generally drink ‘white liquor’ jīngcháng hē báijiǔ. with their meals.

Nǐ zài Zhōngguó de shíhou When you were in China, did you visit qù-guo xīnán méiyǒu? the southwest.
Qù-guo, qù-guo Kūnmíng, [I] did, I went to Kunming, Dali and Lijiang.
Dàlǐ, Lìjiāng.

Nǐ Zhōngwén shuō+de hěn hǎo; You speak Chinese very well; did you nǐ shì bu shì céngjīng xué-guo? study it before? (‘is it the case that you...’) Nǐ tài kèqi, wǒ cóng méi xué-guo. You’re too nice; no, I’ve never studied before.
[NB céngjīng not with a negated verb.]

Additional nuances may be created by the addition of zài ‘at’ or dāng ‘right at’ at the head of the when-clause in conjunction with de shí<hou> at the foot:

<Dāng> tā huílái de shíhou, wǒmen When he got back we were still in the bath.
hái zài xǐzǎo.

<Zài> chīfàn de shíhou bù yīnggāi You shouldn’t drink cold drinks with [your] hē lěngyǐn. meals.

6.4.2 Before and after

Expressions equivalent to ‘before’ and ‘after’ are formed with the yǐ of kěyǐ, originally a verb meaning ‘take; use’; hence yǐqián ‘take as-before’ and yǐhòu ‘take as-after’. Now however, the meanings have congealed into unitary subordinating conjunctions, with the first syllable often omitted in written texts. A more formal version of both words make use of zhī (a particle common in Classical Chinese): zhīqián; zhīhòu.

Shuǐjiào yǐqián bù yīnggāi hē kāfēi. You shouldn't drink coffee before going to bed.

Chīfàn yǐhòu, bù yīnggāi qu yóuyǒng. You shouldn't go swimming after you eat.

Appendix II of this unit lists the more prominent dynasties of Chinese history. 'Dynasty' is cháodài in Chinese, which, in combination with a dynastic name, is reduced to cháo: Tángcháo, Sòngcháo. To help you learn the sequence, as well as to practice yǐqián and yǐhòu, you can ask questions and respond along the following lines:

- | | | |
|----|--|--|
| 1. | Háncháo yǐqián shì nǐ ge cháodài?
Nà shì Qíncháo. [Qínshǐhuáng de cháo dài.] | Which dynasty is before the Han?
That's the Qin. [The dynasty of Qinshihuang (the 1st emperor of Ch'in).] |
| 2. | Tángcháo yǐhòu ne? Tángcháo yǐhòu shì shénme cháodài?
Tángcháo yǐhòu shì Sòngcháo. | And after the Tang? What dynasty is after the Tang?
After the Tang is the Song. |
| | Sòngcháo yǐhòu ne?
Sòngcháo yǐhòu shì Yuáncháo. [Ménggǔ rén de cháo dài.] | And after the Song?
After the Song is the Yuan. [The Mongol dynasty.] |

6.5 When?

The phrase corresponding to the English questions 'when; what time' is shénme shíhou. However, particular segments of time can be questioned with něi or jǐ, as you have seen in earlier units: něi nián 'which year'; něi ge yuè 'which month'; něi ge xīngqī 'which week'; něi tiān 'which day'; lǐbàijǐ 'which day of the week'; jǐ yuè 'what month'; jǐ hào 'what day'. Like other time [when] and place [where] words, such questions generally appear after the subject and before the verb (or predicate):

Qǐngwèn, nǐ shénme shíhou qù Běijīng?
 Xīngqīliù qù. May I ask when you're going to Beijing?
I'm going on Saturday.

Qǐngwèn, nǐ nǎi nián qù Běijīng?
 Wǒ dǎsuàn 2008 nián qù, Àoyùnhuì de nèi nián. May I ask which year you're going to B?
I'm planning to go in 2008, the year of the Olympics.

In regions where Cantonese influence is strong (including Singapore and other parts of Southeast Asia), instead of the shénme shíhou of standard Mandarin, the expression jǐshí 'which time', based on the Cantonese, is often heard:

Tā jǐshí qù Jílóngpō?
 Tā bú qù Jílóngpō, tā qù Mǎliùjiǎ. When's he going to Kuala Lumpur?
He's not going to KL, he's going to Malacca.

Exercise 3.

Write a paragraph along the following lines:

When I was in China, I didn't have much money; I ate noodles for breakfast, lunch and dinner. I didn't eat seafood, and I've still never eaten sea cucumber or soft-shelled turtle – all too expensive! In China, everyday after I got up, I bathed, ate some noodles, and went to the university. I had classes from 9 to 12:30. I ate lunch at 1:00. While I ate, I often read the day's paper. In the afternoon, I did my homework. [Recall that le does not mark habitual or generic events.]

6.5.1 No time for....

Expressions with shíhou (shénme shíhou, shàngkè de shíhou) involve specific periods of time. Shíjiān, on the other hand, is time in a more abstract sense. Here are some common examples:

Shíjiān dào le.	Time's up; it's time.
Zhījiāge shíjiān	Chicago time
Shíjiān bù zǎo le.	It's not early.
Méiyǒu shíjiān chīfàn.	There's no time to have a meal.
Wǒ jīntiān méiyǒu shíjiān kànbào.	I don't have any time to read the paper today.

Exercise 4. Let it be known that you don't have time anymore to:

go swimming.	go see the Great Wall.
to exercise.	phone them.
buy a present for her.	to ask them which floor the toilet's on.
write a letter to them.	to ask them when they're going home.
buy a present for her.	listen to music.

6.6 Places of work

On the Mainland, the subdivisions of government organizations (including universities) are called dānwèi, usually translated as 'unit' or 'work unit'. In the socialist system, your dānwèi provided social amenities from housing to schooling, as well as access to social services and to routes of legitimate advancement.

Tā zài nǐ ge dānwèi gōngzuò?	Which is her work unit? [PRC]
Tā zài jīchǎng gōngzuò, shì jīnglǐ.	She works at the airport; she's a manager.
Nǐ zài shénme dìfang gōngzuò?	Where do you work?
Wǒ zài Hǎidiàn de yí ge diànnǎo gōngsī gōngzuò.	I work in a computer company in Haidian [NW Beijing].

6.7 Directions

So long as one accepts the fact that asking directions will provide little more than that – a direction, then asking directions can be a good way to engage strangers and confirm that you are heading in the right direction. Here are some basic phrases:

wàng qián zǒu	wàng zuǒ zhuǎn ~ guǎi	yìzhí zǒu
towards front go	towards left turn	straight go
keep going straight	turn left	walk straight ahead
cóng zhèi biānr	zài ~ dào dì-sān ge lùkǒu<r>	hónglǜdēng
from this side	at ~ on reaching the 3 rd intersection	red-green-light
this way	[in 3 blocks]	traffic light
chēzhàn <de> duìmiàn		jiù zài yòubiānr
station DE opposite		then on the right-side
opposite the station		it's on the right

Notes

- a) Wàng ‘towards’ is one of a number of directional coverbs that include cóng ‘from’, dào ‘to’, zuò ‘by; on’, and xiàng. The last is similar in meaning to wàng, and in fact, xiàng could substitute for wàng in wàng qián zǒu. Xiàng also appears in the second half of the saying: Hǎohǎo xuéxí, tiāntiān xiàng shàng ‘advance daily’.
- b) For ‘turn’, guǎi may be more common in the north, zhuǎn, more common in the south.
- c) Duìmiàn is another in the class of words known as position words, eg qiántou, zuǒbiānr (cf §4.2.2). So like them, the reference place precedes: fángzi qiántou ‘in front of the house’; fángzi duìmiàn ‘opposite the house’.

Chēzhàn shì bu shì wàng qián zǒu?
Shì, yìzhí zǒu, hěn jìn.

Is the station this way?
Yes, straight ahead, it's quite close.

Xiānsheng, qǐngwèn, dìtiě...dìtiězhàn zài nǎlǐ?

Zài hónglǜdēng nàr, wàng zuǒ guǎi, yìzhí zǒu, dìtiězhàn jiu zài yòu biānr.

Sir, may I ask where the Metro
...the Metro station is?

Turn left at the light, go straight, and the Metro station's on the right.

Qǐngwèn, Tiāntán zěnme zǒu?

Tiāntán...wàng nán zǒu, guò liǎng sān ge lùkǒu jiu dào le!

May I ask how you get to 'The Temple of Heaven'?

The Temple of Heaven, go south, past
2 or 3 intersections and you're there.

Wángfǔ Dàjiē, wàng yòu zhuǎn! [JKW 2005]

Exercise 6

Give directions, as indicated:

1. #5 High School: straight ahead for 2 blocks, on the left.
2. Shìjiè Màoùyì Zhōngxīn ('World Trade Center'): turn left at the light, go a couple of blocks, it's opposite the train station.
3. People's Hospital: left at the second light, then it's on the right.

4. Cháhuā Bīnguǎn ('Camelia Guesthouse', in Kūnmíng): on Dōngfāng Dōng Lù, opposite the stadium; straight ahead, through the next intersection and you're there.
5. Travel Agency: third floor, this way.

6.8 The shì-de construction

Reporting on an event (that has happened) is, under the appropriate conversational conditions, marked by le, either in sentence-final position or under certain conditions, directly after the verb. However, with the addition of a phrase designating location, time, or other circumstances, there are two options: the le option, and the shì-de option. In the latter case, a de (written the same way as the possessive de, 的, as it turns out) is placed at the foot of the sentence, and, optionally, the time or location (the latter always in its pre-verbal position) is highlighted by a preceding shì:

- i. le Wǒmen zài fēijī shàng chī le.
- ii. shì...de Wǒmen <shì> zài fēijī shàng chī de.

The two options are mutually exclusive: either you choose the le option, or the shì-de, but not both. As noted in the previous section, biographical information can be provided in a matter-of-fact way without shì-de: wǒ chūshēng zai Běijīng, yě zhǎng zai Běijīng, etc. However, where the focus is more explicitly on the place, time or other circumstances, then the shì-de pattern is required. In a typical context, an event is established with le or guo, but the follow up questions utilize shì-de:

	Q	A
1	Nǐ qù-guo Zhōngguó ma?	Qù-guo.
	Něi nián qù de?	Qùnián <qù de>.	focus on when
	Yí ge rén qù de ma?	Yí ge rén qù de.	focus on with whom
	Shénme shíhou huílái de?	Wǔyuèfen huílái de.	focus on when

2	Chīfàn le méiyǒu?	Chī le.
	Zài jiā lí chī de ma?	Zài cāntīng chī de.	focus on where
	Hǎochī ma?	Mǎma hūhū.

Similarly, when asking when or where someone was born, or where s/he grew up, the focus is not usually on the birth or childhood – which can be taken for granted – but on the time or location. If you ask a couple when or where they met or got married, the focus is particularly on time and place:

Wǒ <shi> 1946 nián shēng de.	I was born in 1946.
Wǒ <shi> zài Běijīng shēng de.	I was born in Beijing.
Wǒ yě <shi> zài nàr zhǎngdà de.	And I grew up there, too.
Wǒmen <shi> zài Duōlúnduō rènshi de.	We met in Toronto.
Wǒ <shi> zài Bālǐ shàng zhōngxué de.	I went to high school in Paris.

Notes

a) As you may have observed, zhǎng and zhǎngdà differ in distribution: zhǎngdà does not occur with following zài. So the two patterns are: zài Běijīng zhǎngdà de, but zhǎng zai Běijīng.

The prototypical cases of the shi-de construction involve past events, and so it is useful to regard that as a rule. Talking about where you live, for example, does not allow the shi-de pattern:

Wǒ zài Jīntái Lù zhù,	I live on Jintai Road, not far from lí Hóng Miào hěn jìn.	Hóng Miào.

or

Wǒ zhù zài Jīntái Lù, lí Hóng Miào hěn jìn.

In some respects, the shi-de pattern is similar in function (and to a degree, in form) to the so-called ‘cleft construction’ of English, which also spotlights the circumstances (time, place, etc.) by using the verb ‘be’ and the notional equivalent of de, ‘that’. The English construction, however, is optional (or ‘marked’); the Chinese – at least in the situations illustrated – is required.

We met at university.> It was at university - that we met.
 Wǒmen shì zài dàxué rènshi de.

Notice the stress pattern of the English, with high pitch on ‘uniVERsity’, and low pitch on ‘that we met’, which is the part that can be taken for granted, or treated as the lead in for the item of interest, which is the place.

6.8.1 The position of objects

The position of de in the shi-de construction is complicated by the presence of an object. But not for all speakers. As a rule, the de of the shi-de construction is placed at the foot of the sentence; but speakers in the traditional Mandarin speaking regions of the north and northeast (as opposed to southern speakers, including Taiwan) tend to treat objects (that are not pronouns) differently. They place de before the object, rather than after it:

non-northern regions:	Wǒ <shì> zài Bālí shàng dàxué de.	I went to university in Paris.
northern regions:	Wǒ <shì> zài Bālí shàng de dàxué.
non-northern regions:	Tāmen shì nǐ nián lái Běijīng de?	When did they come to Bj?
northern regions:	Tāmen shì nǐ nián lái de Běijīng?
Only option with a pronoun:	Wǒ shàng dàxué de shíhou rènshi tā de.	I met her when I was at university.

In shi-de sentences, de before the object (shàng de dàxué) differs from de after the object (shàng dàxué de) only stylistically (or rhythmically); the two options are otherwise synonymous. The intrusive de is written with the same character (的) as the possessive, but does not function like the latter, though it is possible to construct a written sentence (in speech, intonation is likely to distinguish them) that is potentially ambiguous between the two:

attributive	Shì [zuótiān mǎi de] piào.	[That]’s the ticket we bought yesterday.
ambiguous	Shì zuótiān mǎi de piào.	[Both meanings possible.]
shi-de	Shì zuótiān mǎi piào de.	[We] bought the ticket yesterday.

Exercise 7.

Provide Chinese equivalents:

1. He was born in Xi’an but grew up in Dátóng.
2. My father was born in 1943.
3. He met my mother in Nanjing.
4. She was born in Zhènjiāng.
5. He went to college in San Francisco.

6.8.2 Shì-de in short

- i) Highlights when, where, how or other circumstances; frequent in follow-up questions.
- ii) Generally found only in talking about past events.

past	Tā shì qùnián qù de.
future	Tā 2008 nián dǎsuàn qù Zhōngguó kàn Àoyùnhuì.
current	Tā zài Xī’ān shēng de, kěshì xiànzài zài Běijīng zhù.
- iii) The shì is optional (depending on emphasis), but the de is required.

- iv) Generally places attention on a preverbal phrase. This means that if there is an option, as with location phrases (which can appear before or after verbs like shēng and zhǎng), then it is the preverbal option that will be selected:

Tā shì zài Běijīng shēng de, zài Běijīng zhǎngdà de, xiànzài yě zài Běijīng zhù.

The only obvious exceptions to the preverbal rule are purpose clauses. Recall that purpose usually follows destination in Chinese: qù Běijīng mǎi dōngxi; dào chéng lǐ qǔ hùzhào qu. There is no convenient preverbal option. Yet purpose can be subject to the shi-de formula:

Nǐ shì qù mǎi lǐwù de ma? Did you go to buy presents?
Shì, wǒ shì qù mǎi lǐwù de! Yes, I went to get some presents.

Such sentences can be recast with final qù (recall the various options with purpose clauses), in which case the sentence looks more like a typical shi-de sentence, with mǎi lǐwù the focus of shì, and de following a verb, qù:

Nǐ shì mǎi lǐwù qu de ma? Did you go to buy presents?
Shì, wǒ shì mǎi lǐwù qu de! Yes, I went to get some presents.

- v. When objects – other than pronouns – are present, de can be placed before them:

Wǒ <shì> zài Běijīng shàng dàxué de ~ zài Běijīng shàng de dàxué.

Exercise 8.

Provide a Chinese translation for the following conversation:

“Hello. I’m a student at [...]. My parents were born in Canton City, but I was born in the US, in Chicago. I grew up in Chicago, but now, of course, I live in Boston. I have an older sister. She was also born in Canton.”

“When did your parents come to the US?” / “They came in 1982.”

“Do they still live in Chicago?”

“Yes, they do. They’re coming to see me on Saturday.”

6.9 Dialogue: Where are you from?

Jiǎ is a Chinese student who has just met Yǐ, an overseas student who has been studying Chinese at Qīnghuá Dàxué in Beijing for the past year.

Jiǎ	Qǐngwèn, nǐ shì nǐ guó rén?	May I ask your nationality?
Yǐ	Wǒ shì Jiānádà rén.	I’m Canadian.
Jiǎ	Kěshì nǐ xiàng <yí>ge Zhōngguó rén.	But you look like a Chinese.
Yǐ	Wǒ fùqīn shì Zhōngguó rén, mǔqīn shì Měiguó rén, kěshì wǒ shēng zài Jiānádà. Nǐ qù-guo ma?	My father’s Chinese, my mother’s American, but I was born in Canada. Have you been?
Jiǎ	Méi qù-guo, kěshì hěn xiǎng qù. Nǐ shì Jiānádà shénme dìfāng rén?	I haven’t, but I’d love to. Whereabouts in Canada are you from?
Yǐ	Duōlúnduō, wǒ shēng zài Duōlúnduō, wǒ yě zhù zài Duōlúnduō.	Toronto, I was born in Toronto. and I live in Toronto.
Jiǎ	O, Duōlúnduō, wǒ nàr yǒu qīnqī.	Oh, Toronto, I have relatives there.
Yǐ	Shì ma?	Really?

- Jiǎ Wǒ tángxiōng zài nàr, shì yīshēng. My cousin [older, father's side] is there
 -- [he]'s a doctor.
- Yǐ Nà, nǐ ne? Nǐ shì Běijīng rén ba? And you, you're from Beijing?
- Jiǎ Bù, wǒ shēng zài Xī'ān, yě zhǎng No, I was born in Xi'an, and I zài Xī'ān kěshì xiànzài zhù zài grew up in Xi'an but now I Běijīng. live in Beijing.
- Yǐ Nǐ shì nǐ nián lái de Běijīng? Which year did you come to Beijing?
- Jiǎ Wǒ shì 1998 nián lái de. Wǒ fùmǔ I came in 1998. My parents still live in hái zhù zài Xī'ān. Xi'an.
- Yǐ Nà nǐ xǐ bù xǐhuan Běijīng? So do you like Beijing?
- Jiǎ Běijīng bú cuò, kěshì wǒ hěn xiǎng Beijing's not bad, but I miss Xi'an.
 Xī'ān.
- Yǐ Wǒ qù-guò Xī'ān, Xī'ān hěn hǎowánr. I've been to Xi'an, it's a great place to visit.
- Jiǎ Nǐ shì shénme shíhou qù de? When was it that you went?
- Yǐ Wǒ shì qùnián qù de. I went last year.
- Jiǎ Xià cì qù, qǐng dào wǒ jiā lai Next time [you] go, you should 'come wánwánr. by my house'.
- Yǐ O, xièxie, nǐ tài kèqi. Oh, thanks, you're very kind.

Notes

- a) Tángxiōng ‘elder male cousin (on father’s side)’; cf. tángdì, tángjiě and tángmèi. Táng is ‘a room’ (cf. yì táng kè), ‘the main house’, or by extension, ‘the clan’. The táng cousins all share a surname. The mother’s side cousins are all biǎo, which means ‘surface’ or ‘outside’: biǎoxiōng, biǎodì, biǎojiě, biǎomèi.
- b) Qǐng dào wó jiā lái wánr is a conventional phrase, equivalent to ‘you must come by and see us’; often preceded by yǒu kòng<r> [qǐng dào....] ‘[if] you have free time...’

6.9.1 Wánr

Wánr is interesting not only for its pronunciation (one of the few common verbs with the r-suffix), but also for its meaning. In dictionaries, it is glossed ‘play; have fun; play around with’ but in many cases an appropriate translation is difficult to find. In the Chinese world, wánr is the counterpart of gōngzuò ‘work’; in English we sometimes place ‘work and play’ in opposition as well. So a better translation would be ‘have a good time; for some fun’. Wán<r> can also be a verb meaning ‘fool around with [for fun]’; cf. máng ‘be busy’ and máng shénme ‘be busy at what’.

Nèi ge dìfang hěn hǎowánr.	That place is very interesting.
Yǒu kòng<r> qǐng zài lái wánr.	If you have some time, come by again.
Zánmen gàn shénme wánr ne? Dǎ májiàng ba!	What shall we do for fun? Why don't we play mahjong?
MIT xuéshēng hěn xǐhuan wánr diànnǎo.	MIT students love to fool around with computers.

Notes

- a) Qǐng zài lái wánr, with zài jiàn de zài (再), meaning ‘again’.

Exercise 9.

a) Translate:

1. There are a lot of large cities [dà chéngshì] in China.
2. Why are there so many people outside?
3. May I ask where you work?
4. I was born in Tianjin, but I live in Beijing nowadays.
5. We're going to Shanghai on the 18th.
6. My father's in Kunming – he's a manager for a computer company.
7. Next time you're in Kunming, please come by my house for a visit.

b) Write questions that would elicit the following answers:

1. Wǒmen shì shàngge xīngqī sì lái de.
2. Zhōngwén kè, lǐbàiyī dào sì dōu yǒu, lǐbàiwú méiyǒu.
3. Xiàge yuè wǒ dǎsuàn qù Huángshān kànkàn fēngjǐng [‘scenery’].
4. Lóuxià yǒu diànhuà, lóushàng méiyǒu.
5. Wǒ hái méi qùguo, dànshì hěn xiǎng qù.

6.10 Calling Michael Jordan6.10.1 Jiào with two objects

The familiar verb jiào can take two objects, with the meaning ‘call someone something’:

Wǒmen jiào tā Chén lǎoshī.	We call him ‘Chen laoshi’.
Dàjiā dōu jiào tā lǎo fūzǐ.	Everyone calls him ‘the studious one’.
Nǐ jiào tā shénme?	What do you call her?
Péngyou dōu jiào wǒ Xiǎomíng.	Friends call me ‘young’ Míng.

A more colloquial form of this construction makes use of the verb guǎn whose root meaning (as a verb) is ‘be in charge of’:

Wǒmen guān tā jiào lǎoshī.	We call her ‘teacher’.
Tāmen guān tā jiào fàntǒng.	They call him ‘rice bucket’. (ie ‘big eater’)

6.10.2 Finding out how to address someone

Frequently, in talking to someone with status, it may not be clear what form of address is appropriate. At such times a direct inquiry will help, using the verb chēnghu ‘call or address’, or as is appropriate in this context, ‘be called; be addressed’:

Jiǎ: Qǐngwèn, nín zěnmē chēnghu?	Excuse me, sir/madame, how should you be addressed?
Yǐ: Nǐmen jiào wǒ Yáng lǎoshī jiu hǎo le.	It’s fine if you call me Yang laoshi.

6.10.3 Dialogue

People in China will often ask about foreign entertainers and sports people. Here, a Chinese youth (Ch.) asks an overseas student (For.) about an American sports star:

Ch. Xǐhuan Mǎikè Qiáodān ma?	Do you like Michael Jordan?
For. Shéi / shuí?	Who?
Ch. Mǎikè Qiáodān, dǎ lánqiú de.	Michael Jordan, the one who plays basketball.
For. O, <Michael Jordan>. Tā de míngzi zěnmē shuō? Qǐng zài shuō yí biàn.	Oh, Michael Jordan. How do you say his name? Please repeat it.
Ch. Mǎikè Qiáodān. Wǒmen dōu jiào tā ‘Fēirén.’	Michael Jordan. We all call him the ‘Flying Man.’
For. Fēirén? Shénme yìsi?	Feiren? What does [that] mean?
Ch. Zěnmē shuō ne...tā xiàng niǎo <yíyàng>, néng fēi.	How to say [it] - he’s like the birds, he can fly.
For. Eì, bú cuò.	Right!

Notes

dǎ lánqiú de literally ‘hit basketball one,’ ie ‘the one who plays basketball’ fēirén ‘flying-man’; MJ was also called lánqiú-dàdì ‘basketball-great-emperor’ in China.
 niǎo ‘bird’; alternatively, tā xiàng fēijī ‘he’s like an airplane’.

This is a good time to mention some Chinese sports figures who are, or have been well known outside China: Yáo Míng (dǎ lánqiú de, 2003, Xiūsīdùn) and Wáng Zhìzhì (dǎ lánqiú de, 2003, Yìndì’ānnà); Zhuāng Zédòng (dǎ pīngpāngqiú de guànjūn ‘a champion pingpong player’, flourished in the late 1950s, early 1960s); Láng Píng aka Tiělángtōu ‘iron-hammer’ (nǚde, dǎ páiqiú de guànjūn ‘a volleyball champion’ from the 1980s); Chén Féidé, whose English name is Michael Chang (dǎ wǎngqiú de guànjūn, 1990s).

6.10.4 Yíyàng ‘the same’

As observed in the previous dialogue, xiàng ‘resemble’ is optionally followed by the expression yíyàng ‘the same’, literally ‘one-kind’ (cf. jiu zhèi yàng<r> ba, zěnmeyàng and a host of other phrases that make use of the root yàng). Yíyàng can be used independently of xiàng, with items to be matched connected by conjunctions such as gēn or hé:

Tā gēn wǒ yíyàng: wǒmen He’s like me: we’re both 1st year dōu shì yì niánjí de xuésheng. students.

Tā hé wǒ yíyàng: dōu shì dúshēngzi. He’s just like me; we’re both only children.

Nà nǐ shuō de hé tā shuō de bù Now, what you are saying isn’t the same yíyàng. as what he’s saying.

Yí cì de cì hé yì huí de huí, yìsi The cì of yí cì and the huí of yì huí have chàbuduō yíyàng. roughly the same meaning.

Note

Observe the order of elements in the last example: Topic [yí cì de cì hé yì huí de huí] followed by a comment [yìsi chàbuduō yíàng]. Yìsi – sometimes called the inner subject – refines the scope of yíàng.

Exercise 10.

1. He's very strict, so we call him 'the boss.'
2. She's my mother's sister, so we call her 'auntie.'
3. Because Mr. Chen's a director, people call his wife 'Madame' Chen.
4. Because he's rather old, we call him 'lǎodàye.'
5. Although [suīrán] she's not a teacher, we still call her Professor Liào.
6. Excuse me, may I ask how we should address you? / It's okay to call me Liáng Àimín or 'Professor' Liáng.
7. Their names are the same: they're both called Lín Měi.
8. They live in the same place. [ie 'The places they live in....']

6.11 Food (3)

Chinese dishes are variously named. Some are descriptive: chǎojiǎodīng 'stirfried-chicken-cubes'; zhàcài-ròusī-tāng 'pickled-cabbage meat-shreds soup'. Others incorporate proper names: Yángzhōu-chǎofàn 'Yangzhou fried rice' (from Yángzhōu, a city on the north shore of the Yangtze, east of Nanjing). Numbers are also common: shāo'èrdōng 'cooked-2-winters', ie usually dōnggǔ 'winter mushrooms' and dōngsǔn 'winter bamboo-shoots'. Finally, there are dishes with poetic or allusive names: gǒubulǐ bāozi 'dog-not-obey steamed buns', a Tianjin specialty. Listed below are some other examples which can be incorporated in prior dialogues dealing with food.

máogū jīpiàn	(‘hairy-mushroom chicken-slices’), often listed on menus by its Cantonese name, ‘moogoo gaipan’.
tángcùyú	‘sweet and sour fish (sugar-vinegar-fish)’

Běijīng kǎoyā	‘Peking duck’
Dōngpòròu	a rich pork dish, associated with the Song dynasty poet and statesman, Sū Dōngpò, also called Sū Shì.
sānxiān-hǎishēn	‘3-fresh sea-cucumber’, ie sea cucumber with 3 fresh items, typically shredded pork, bamboo shoots and chicken.
máyǐ shàngshù	‘ants climb-tree’, spicy ground beef sauce poured over deepfried ‘beanthread’ noodles; the dish is named for the small bumps that appear on the noodles.
mápo dòufu	‘hot and spicy beancurd’, a Sichuan dish with cubes of beancurd, minced pork and spicy sauce

soups

jiācháng dòufu tāng	‘home-cooked beancurd soup’
zhūgān<r>tāng	‘pork-liver-soup’

Qǐng zài lái ge máyǐ-shàngshù! [JKW 2001]

6.12 Highlights

Opposites	Cháng de xiāngfǎn shì duǎn.
Descriptions	Tā rén hěn hǎo, jiùshì yǒu diǎnr hàixiū. Tā tóufa shì hēisè de. – Tā shì hēi tóufa. Tā zhǎng+de hěn piàoliang.
V-guo	Tā cónglái méi qù-guo Zhōngguó. Nǐ chī-guo hǎishēn ma?
SVxx	Húaliūliū de.
Indefinite shénme	Méi shénme wèidào.
Times	Wǒ yǐjīng jiànguo tā jǐ cì. Qǐng zài shuō yí biàn.
When	Shàngkè de shíhou bù yīnggāi shuō Yīngwén.
Before	Shuǐjiào yǐqián bù yīnggāi zuò yùndòng.
After	Míngcháo yǐhòu shì Qīngcháo.
When?	Nǐ shénme shíhou néng qù hùzhào?
No time	Wǒmen méiyǒu shíjiān zuòfàn.
Place of work	Nǐ zài nǐ ge dānwèi gōngzuò? Wǒ bàba zài dì-èr Rénmín Yīyuàn gōngzuò.
Directions	Wàng qián zǒu, dào dì-yī ge lùkǒu wàng zuǒ zhuǎn. Qǐngwèn, dìtiězhàn zěnme zǒu? (Zěnme qù dìtiězhàn?)
Shi...de	Wǒ shì zài 1976 nián shēng de. Tā zài Běijīng shēng de, zài Běijīng zhǎngdà de, yě zài Běijīng zhù. Nǐ shì nǐ nián lái de Běijīng?
Call me X	Péngyou dōu jiào wǒ xiǎo Míng.
How to address you?	Nín zěnme chēnghu?
The same	Tā gēn wǒ yíyàng, dōu shì xué wùlǐ de.

Exercise 11.

Distinguish the following words (or compound parts) by citing them in a short phrase that reveals their meaning:

yǐjīng	jīngcháng	céngjīng	xiāngfǎn	yíyàng	kù
cónglái	huílai	méi lái	hěn guāi	sān kuài	kǔ
yīnwèi	yǐnliào	wèidào	jiào	qiáo	jiāo
gōngsī	gōngkè	gōngzuò	kǎoshì	gànhuór	biàn
zhù	qù	qǔ	yòu	yǒu	shíjiān
zhǎng	Zhāng	cháng	chàng	shàng	shíhou
shòu	shuō	shǒu	zuò	zuǒ	zǒu

6.13 Rhymes and rhythms

1) Here's some political irony, overheard at a meeting of Chinese teachers; no one wished to go on record, so it is cited anonymously.

Néng hē yì jīn, hē bā liǎng: duìbuqǐ rénmín, duìbuqǐ dǎng.	Can drink 1 jin [but] drinks 8 ounces: apologies to the people, apologies to the party.
--	---

Néng hē bā liǎng, hē yì jīn: rénmín hé dǎng xīnliánxīn.	Can drink 8 ozs. [but] drinks 1 jin: people and party, heart-linked to-heart.
---	---

Notes

Jīn is a Chinese measure equal to 1/2 a kilogram; a jīn contains 16 liǎng or 'ounces'. Rénmín are 'the people' and dǎng is 'the [communist] party'. Xīn is 'heart; feelings'.

2) And finally, another nursery rhyme about small animals:

Chóng, chóng chóng, chóng

Chóng, chóng chóng, chóng fēi, insects... fly

fēidào Nánshān hē lùshuǐ;

fly-to South Mountain to+drink dew lùshuǐ hēbǎo le,

dew drink-full LE huítóu jiù pǎo le!

turn-head then run LE

Newspaper kiosk, Kūnmíng [JKW 1997]

Appendix I: Chinese historical periods

(dates, following Wilkinson, 2000, pp 10-12)

Dynasty	pinyin	dates	notes
夏朝	Xiàcháo Hsia Kingdom	Before 1554 BC	Dà Yú ‘Great Yu’, who controlled the floods.
商朝	Shāngcháo Shang Dynasty	~ 1600 – 1045 BC	Shāng Tāng (founder)
周朝	Zhōucháo Chou Dynasty	1045 – 256 BC	Zhōu Gōng ‘Duke of Chou’
春秋	Chūnqiū Shídài Spring and Autumn Period	770 – 476 BC	Kǒngzǐ ‘Confucius’
戰國	Zhànguó Shídài Warring States Period	475 – 221 BC	Měngzǐ ‘Mencius’
秦朝	Qíncháo Ch’in Dynasty	221 – 206 BC	Qínshǐhuáng ‘1 st Emp.of Ch’in’, political unification.
漢朝	Hàncháo Han Dynasty	202 BC – 220 AD	Liú Bāng (founder) k.a. Hàn Gāodì ‘Great Emp.of Han’
三國	Sānguó Shídài Three Kingdoms	220 – 280	Cáo Cāo, ruler of Wèi (north) Zhū Gěliàng, PM of Shǔ (west)
隋朝	Suícháo Sui Dynasty	581 – 618	Suí Yángdì, 1 st Emperor
唐朝	Tángcháo Tang Dynasty	618 – 907	Táng Tàizōng = Lǐ Shì mín 1 st Emperor
宋朝	Sòngcháo Sung Dynasty	960 – 1279	Sòng Tàizǔ = Zhào Kuàngyīn

元朝	Yuáncháo Yuan Dynasty	1279 – 1368	Yuán Tàizǔ = Chéngjí Sìhàn [Mongol dunasty]
明朝	Míngcháo Ming Dynasty	1368 – 1644	Míng Tàizǔ = Zhū Yuánzhāng
清朝	Qīngcháo Ch'ing Dynasty	1644 – 1912	Kāngxī, emp. from 1654-1722; Qiánlóng, emp. from 1711-99
中華民國	Zhōnghuá Mínguó The Republic of China	1912 –	Sūn Zhōngshān = Sūn Yìxiān 'Sun Yatsen' [founder]
中華人民- 共和國	Zhōnghuá Rénmín Gònghéguó The People's Republic of China	1949 –	Máo Zédōng [founder]

MIT OpenCourseWare
<http://ocw.mit.edu>

Resource: Learning Chinese: A Foundation Course in Mandarin
Dr. Julian K. Wheatley

The following may not correspond to a particular course on MIT OpenCourseWare, but has been provided by the author as an individual learning resource.

For information about citing these materials or our Terms of Use, visit: <http://ocw.mit.edu/terms>.